-Harper's Round Table, OUR WOBBLY EARTH.

It Is Poised Delicately and Slightest Variations Are Noticeable.

(From the Baltimore Herald.) The discovery that the axis of the earth is not fixed in direction, but that it swings round in such a way as to cause the north months round a circle ten yards in diamater, is now generally accepted as an established

Itis evident that such a webbling of the earth's axis of rotation, small though it be, must produce some effect upon the level of of the very careful records, which have the ocean at its shores, and anexamination been kept for more than forty years, of the height of the tide in the canal at Helder, in Holland, was recently made for the pur pose of determining whether such an effect could be perceived.

The result of the examination showed that the average level of the water had varied with great regularity, in a recur-ring period of 14 months, ever since the ide records were begun in 1851. The inference is that this regular change of level must be due to the swinging round of the axis of the earth. The amount by which the lovel changes—a little less than five-eighths of an inch—also corresponds to the calculated change that should result from the proposed cause.

So we are gradually learning to appreciate how delicately the ponderous earth is polsed as it swings in its vast orbit round the sun, and how even the mighty ocean responds to the slightest tipping this way and that of the great axis of the globe.

MYSTERY OF A MAINE ISLAND. A Hermit Englishman Who Ended

His Misecy by Cutting His Throat. "Some years ago, up at North Haven Island, on the Maine coast," said a New Yorker, "I came across a mystery that haunts me still. A bare rocky point juts out into the sea on one side of the island, and the first year that I visited the place there was a rude cabin on the rock. Having gone out there from curiosity one day, I found a man in shameful rags trying out the oil from the refuse from a fish-canning fatcory. When I came to examine the man his appearance astonished me. He was an extremely handsome, well-made Englishman of forty or thereabouts. His hands, soiled with the material be worked in, were small and well shaped. When I tried to draw him into conversation he at first answered in monosyllables and was almost sulky in his reserve. He gradually thawed, however, and I found that he spoke rare and beautiful English, that of a well-read and well-bred man, Glancing into the door of his cabin, I could see perhaps a score of well-thumbed volumes in library binding. His reserve was such that I could not ask him about himself, but I left the island deeply interested in him.

"I turned up at North Haven the next year, and one of the earliest things I did was to go out to the point in search of my acquaintance. The rock was bare again, and there was no trace of him and his cottage. I asked about him of some persons I met on the island, and bere is what I learned. He had come to the place mysteriously some years before, having been dropped by a schooner. He found work at the fish cannery, but later quit the place, built his cabin on the rock, supplied himself with food chiefly by fishing, and obtained from the factory the privilege of trying oil from the refuse. From the prodbacco and other luxuries. At some tim between my two visits his cable was discovered to be on fire late one night, and, burrying down, his neighbors saw him amid the flames dead, with his throat cut. The fire had so seized upon the but that his body could not be removed until it was nearly onsumed. He was buried, and no solo tion of the mystery was discovered. Life had evidently become insupportable to him, and he had taken the way of suicide as the easiest one out of misery."

Rath Room Rugs.

Some sort of a pretty rug is necessary to put beside the bathtub to step out upon, and it is quite essential that it should be of some material in which the colors are well There are on sale cork mats and others which resemble Turkish toweling, only they are of heavy weight, but the rug to be made at home is frequently in demand. One is made of coarse basket canvas, with a plush-like center, the embroidery being worked with thick ingrain or colored cotton, and each stitch crossed over one thread of the material. The pattern may be worked all over or merely as a border, with a plain enter, but when covered all over the mat will not be so likely to show any discolorations of water.

Odd lengths of Brussels carpets may be turned to good account for mats, with a finish on the edge of worsted fringe or a binding of heavy upholstered braid.
